New York City Network Meeting
October 30th 12-2 theHUB 6304.02

The Public Space Research Group is hosting a presentation by Jennifer Gardner, program manager at Gehl Institute and project lead on the Inclusive Healthy Places :: Public space is an often underutilized resource for health and community-building. How do we know when public space supports health equity, and when the processes that shape public spaces are inclusive? To answer this question, Gehl Institute partnered with the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation to create the Inclusive Healthy Places Framework. The framework is a collection of drivers, indicators, and metrics that aim to demonstrate a new way of looking at the connection between health and public space as a specific area of the built environment.
